Adapt to change

While it's natural to resist change, clinging to the status quo can often stifle growth and innovation. Embracing change, even when it's challenging, can lead to new opportunities and personal development. Consider these tips:

- Be patient with yourself. When a "new normal" arrives, allow yourself to be temporarily sad or worried. Everyone adjusts to change at different rates.
- Explore your thoughts. Take time to check in with your emotions and acknowledge what you are feeling.
- Prepare for the new normal. Reframe your thoughts in a positive direction, and take some action that gives you forward momentum in relation to the change.
- Manage the stress of change. Change and stress go hand in hand. Practice relaxation techniques, meditate, work out or use other stress-reducing tactics.
- Cultivate a positive inner circle. Spend time with others who, instead of draining you with negativity, are adapting and moving forward.

Mind Your Mental Health

February is Boost Self-Esteem Month

Whether we believe in the concept of self-esteem or not, it is clear that feeling good about ourselves contributes to overall well-being. High self-esteem is associated with positive emotions, strong relationships, and a sense of purpose. Conversely, low self-esteem can lead to negative thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. So, how can you stay on the good side of the self-esteem ledger?

- Remember your “wins.” Remind yourself of the remarkable things you have done, no matter how insignificant they may seem. Know that you can succeed again!
- Always build a better you. As you examine your vision for the future, keep developing positive habits that help you achieve those desires. You’ll experience personal growth, plus meet your goals and achieve new heights.
- Wield compliments well. When someone praises you for your qualities or a job well done, fully accept those thanks and pass them on to help others feel good as well. Positivity is contagious!
- Don’t seek perfection. Remember that everyone makes mistakes sometimes. Pick yourself back up and keep pursuing your goals. They’re worth it!
